There are many options in California for adults who need assistance with daily living activities such as meal preparation, dressing, bathing and taking medication. Some options available are group living situations which may not be comfortable for some individuals who value their privacy and independence.

Assisted living facilities offer residents the opportunity to live in their own apartment and provide services such as an onsite restaurant, beauty salon, medical center, and other conveniences. There are a variety of assisted living facilities and some are more luxurious than others. Each offers different levels of service but most offer social opportunities such as a community room with game nights, entertainment and sometimes a music room. Assisted living facilities allow people to live independently while still having someone come to them several times a day, or as needed, to provide care and companionship.

Assisted living facilities usually charge a monthly rent and additional fees for services. It is important to compare services and living conditions in addition to rates to fully appreciate the different types of assisted living facilities as there is no required standard for facilities.
