1. Reflections on Memorial Day

Memorial Day used to be a solemn day of mourning, a sacred remembrance to honor those who paid the ultimate price for our freedoms. Stores and Businesses closed for the day. Towns held parades for the fallen, the parade routes often times ending at a local cemetery. Memorial Day speeches were given and prayers offered up. People spent time that day to clean and decorate with flowers and flags the graves of those who fell in service to their country.

We need to remember with sincere respect those who paid the price for our freedoms; we need to keep in sacred remembrance those who died for their country. We need to never let them be forgotten. However, over time the original meaning and spirit of Memorial Day has faded from our consciousness.

"If it is considered a holiday, why is it so? I consider it to be a day of mourning. This is how we observe this day in our home. Because that day represents the rest of the days of the year are our holidays

Lloyd West Chester, Pa USA - February 26, 2000

I fly the Flag 365 days a year, wear a USA flag tie to court and shorts to the running races. On Memorial Day we need to stop and have a sincere conviction our respects for those who died protecting and the freedoms we enjoy, for we owe those honored dead more than we can repay.

2. Recent cases: ALJ can reduce suspension proposed by MVC. New Jersey Motor Vehicle Commission App. Div. unreported 1110-13T2 decided Jan. 8, 2015

Bamfo appealed from a final decision of the Motor Vehicle Commission suspending his driver's license for 30 days because he was convicted of a moving violation while his license was on probationary status as a result of prior violations. Affirming, the panel found that the MVC had applied the applicable statutes and regulations in determining that a suspension was required because of Bamfo's record of moving violations and that the 30-day suspension, which had been reduced from 90 days, was an appropriate accommodation of his hardship request (that his job required that he might lose the job), and that Bamfo had provided no ground for the panel to disagree with the MVC's decision. 3. Lawyer Had No Duty to Disclose Client's possible Offense. State v. Kane App. Div. docket 12-07-0449 unreported February 17, 2015

A lawyer whose client pleaded guilty in municipal court to the traffic offense of driving with a suspended license was not obligated to inform the prosecutor that the client was subject to indictment and harsher because her license had been suspended for drunken driving, a New Jersey appeals court has held. The court, however, faulted the lawyer, Steven Kane, for having his client, Davi Kane, later withdraw the guilty plea. The court explained to her that she would lose her protection against double jeopardy and be exposed to prosecution for a fourth-degree crime carrying a maximum sentence of a half-year in jail, which is what eventually occurred.
