By: Jeremy Geigle, Attorney at Law
JacksonWhite, P.C.

In most Phoenix child molestation cases, a prosecutor will not usually show much lenience toward the defendant. Without proper representation, a defendant charged with child molestation in Phoenix will almost always receive the harshest possible sentence if convicted. In addition, Arizona prosecutors have been known to prosecute child pornography offenders to the full extent of the law whenever possible.

Child molestation can occur when an adult abuses a minor for their own personal gratification. Phoenix sex crimes attorney Jeremy Geigle knows that sometimes, an adult can be wrongfully accused of molesting a child. There are in fact some cases where an adult was falsely accused from the beginning, and never had the intention of abusing a minor for their own personal gratification. In child molestation cases such as these, where the defendant believes that they are innocent, it is critical that the defendant seek advice from an experienced Phoenix sex crimes attorney. Just because the defendant knows that they are innocent doesn't mean that the prosecution will let up on the case. A defendant can still be convicted of a sex crime against a child even if abuse did not occur.
