

Avoid DUI Attorneys Who Guarantee Dropped Charges

When you are facing DUI charges, it is important to secure qualified and experienced legal counsel. No matter if you are guilty or not, it's important to have a good South Florida DUI attorney on your side.

South Florida DUI Attorneys to Avoid

There are some South Florida DUI attorneys that you should avoid at all costs. Even if you aren't guilty, no attorney can provide you with a guaranteed outcome.

If you are told what you can expect to have happen, you might want to question whether you have the right legal representation. Guilty or not, promises should never be made.

You should always avoid the type of attorney who guarantees that your charges will be dropped. They may tell you that you don't have to worry about losing points on your driver's license or even the possibility of it being revoked. They are not the ones who make a decision in this type of case. If you are brought up on DUI charges, a judge or jury will be the ones to decide the outcome.

Another type of attorney you should avoid is one who guarantees a reduction in penalties. If you are found guilty, they cannot decide what your punishment will be. Again, only a judge or jury will be responsible for that.

You should also avoid an attorney who doesn't share what their fees are. If they aren't willing to fully disclose what you can expect in the way of legal costs, they may not be trustworthy.

An attorney should openly share whether you will need to pay a flat rate or if it will be done on a contingency basis. That means you won't have to pay them unless you win. Be sure you fully understand ahead of time what their fees are.

Avoiding the wrong kind of attorney is vital. However, it is just as important to learn what to look for when you do require legal counsel.

Here are some questions you should ask a potential South Florida attorney before you decide to hire them:

- What potential difficulties do you see in my case?
- Do you have references?
- What strategy will you use in representing my side?
- How many cases have you gone to trial with?
- Will you or someone else be handling my case?

The things you want to look for in a good attorney are someone who is experienced, qualified, and knowledgeable. You should also feel comfortable with them.

Don't pick the first attorney you talk to. Take some time in selecting your South Florida DUI attorney.

You should ask those you know and trust if they can recommend a good attorney for your case. It's also a good idea to utilize the internet, which can provide a wealth of information surrounding a potential law firm.

Most DUI attorneys have websites that provide case results, testimonials from past clients, articles, and a variety of other helpful resources. These can provide guidance when making a decision as to who will represent you.
