

SAN DIEGO COURT REPORTERS – WHERE TO PARK DOWNTOWN

NOVEMBER 16, 2011

I have previously written a post about where court reporters and videographers could park in Los Angeles. Court reporters, legal videographers, and attorneys working in downtown San Diego have similar issues of where to park, find the entrance to parking garages, and find the best rates. I found a great website that takes away the worry or wonder of where to park at www.sandiegobestparking.com. If you choose San Diego and insert the zip code you are traveling to, you will find a map populated with parking lots, pricing, and location.

As a court reporter, it is important to be as stress-free as possible before you get to a job. There are enough things to worry about with attorneys' names, identifications, organizing exhibits, and writing FAST. Parking should not be an issue, and being late for a deposition, arbitration, or hearing because of parking issues is never a good excuse, and one that will probably have the client calling your firm asking that you not be sent back.

Legal videographers need to be on location at least an hour before the job is to begin, and court reporters need to be at a deposition 30 minutes early if they are writing realtime and at least 20 minutes early to set up for the deposition.

Being a freelance court reporter and legal videographer in downtown San Diego doesn't have to be stressful or too expensive when looking for a place to park.
