

If You Have Arizona Divorce Tax Issues, You Need an Arizona Family Law Attorney!

By: Timothy Durkin, Attorney at Law
JacksonWhite, P.C.

Parties to a divorce in Arizona should always consider the tax implications of a divorce before making any financial arrangements, especially if children are involved. When a divorcing couple has children together, the court makes the final decision as to which parent gets to claim the exemption(s) for child dependency on their tax return. Further, ex-spouses should also keep in mind that although Arizona spousal maintenance payments are tax-deductible, Arizona child support payments are not.

When parties to a divorce in Arizona fail to anticipate tax issues, they may encounter difficult financial problems down the road.

Timothy Durkin joined JacksonWhite in 2010, and quickly established himself as a highly effective family law attorney with the perfect balance of assertiveness and compassion. Tim is often complimented for his dedication to professional service, as he works closely with his clients to keep them informed, listen to their needs and involve them in the decision making process.

Tim handles all types of family law, including divorces, paternity actions, child custody, child support, relocation and jurisdiction issues, adoptions, termination of parental rights and parental severance actions, title 8 guardianships, spousal maintenance cases, division of marital property and debts, pre-nuptial agreements, post decree modifications and enforcement of custody and divorce orders, mediation services, grandparent visitation cases, and domestic violence issues. He is licensed to practice law in all Arizona State Courts, as well as the United States District Court, District of Arizona, and serves clients throughout the Phoenix metro area.
