

Where to Find Expert Dallas Litigation Support

For attorneys in the Dallas/Fort Worth area, the question of where to find expert Dallas litigation support services is an important one. Choosing the right court reporter to provide that support can expand the attorney's capabilities, increase their efficiency, and allow them to provide better representation to their client.

Where to Begin?

Twenty years ago, this question would have a completely different answer. With the explosion of the internet, an online search is really the only way to go. The vast majorities of litigation services companies, as well as most freelance or independent court reporters, have a working website they use to market their services. A quick search for "Dallas litigation support" will yield several pages of court reporters and litigation services providers. To break that list down even more, the attorney needs to ask some hard questions...

The Services You Need

Discovering what services each court reporter and litigation support firm provides is the most important aspect of finding the right fit for the attorney's needs. Does the Dallas court reporter provide access to an online transcript repository? If so, is the interface easy for the attorney to handle, or does it require a high level of technical savvy? Does the court reporter offer realtime court reporting? How about legal video services? Which of the services are included as part of each individual service package offered, and which services require an additional fee?

Are You Experienced?

The last thing the attorney needs when they head into an important case is to have an inexperienced court reporter taking the depositions. By asking several pointed questions, the attorney can determine how much experience the court reporter has, not only in general, but in the area required by the attorney for this specific case. Are references provided? Can the Dallas court reporter provide references that match up with the type of services required by the attorney? Once the references have been provided, the attorney needs to call those references and verify that all of the information provided by the court reporter is accurate, and not overinflated to make them look good.

Schedule and Logistics

Making sure that the court reporter is able to meet the scheduling and logistical requirements of your case. If depositions are being taken in multiple locations, is the court reporter able to travel to meet the need? All of the technical capabilities in the world are no good if the court reporter isn't able to provide those services when and where they are needed.

By taking a very organized tact when searching for the best litigation support services in Dallas, the attorney can ensure that they make the smart choice from among all the litigation support options available. Asking the right questions and verifying the answers will give the attorney all the ammunition necessary to select the candidate who can provide the services and the expertise the attorney requires.
