Signs of an Unreasonable Client...

Does your lawyer avoid you like the plague, saying he's in "Court," or she's in depositions? Maybe they are or maybe you are an unreasonable client!

Signs of an Unreasonable client:

- You want it yesterday. (Most things are not emergencies and even the basic take time to get right. Allow adequate time.)
- You want it your way. (This is not Burger King. Usually, doing it your way lead to the mess you are now in.)
- You do not heed advice. (Similar to wanting it your way, you ignore instructions such as "DO NOT COMMUNICATE WITH HIM IN ANY MANNER WHATSOEVER!" and then you call, text, email and send smoke signals and a fight ensues.)
- You blame the messenger. (A lot of times attorneys have to deliver crummy news due to bad circumstances. It's not because we want you to suffer, but it is because that is the way it is.)
- You think everything is an EMERGENCY. (It's not.)
- You want something for nothing. (You may well get what you pay for.)
- You paid last year and think they owe you. (That was a year ago. See You want something for nothing.)
- You call the office, leave a message, call the cell phone, leave a message, send 2 texts, send 1 email, and call the paralegal all within 3 minutes and it is NOT an emergency. (This is wholly unnecessary.)

Matthew Thompson is a Mississippi Divorce attorney and knows a thing or two about unreasonable clients. If you identify with 2 or more of the above you may well be an Unreasonable Client, see your lawyer at their next available appointment for treatment.
