When To Get A New York Car Accident Lawyer Involved

Do you really need a lawyer's help after you were in a car accident? That's a tricky question with no easy answer. If you were not hurt in the accident and your car is in a decent condition, you can probably go forward without working with an attorney. If you or any other involved party were injured, though, things become more difficult. If there was a permanent injury or an injury that's going to require significant medical expenses, for example, you'll probably want to work an attorney. If you are going to have to miss work or school, an attorney can probably help you. There are dozens of variables at play, and it's hard to come up with a clear yes or no answer.

In some cases, you will want to contact an attorney immediately. If the injury was serious or requires hospitalization, call an attorney. If you don't know who was at fault, you need an attorney immediately. You should also call a lawyer if there were multiple parties involved, if you don't agree with the police report at the scene, or you think that there was any kind of technical issue on which the case could turn. Your own personal circumstances can make the case far more complex than you might image.

You may also want to consider talking to an attorney if you are offered a settlement that doesn't feel quite right. It's also a good idea to talk to a lawyer if you aren't sure what kind of insurance will be used in the case, or if you think that fault might end up being a minor issue. Any dealing with your insurer should lead you to talk to an attorney, especially if you don't think your own insurance company is dealing with you in good faith. In fact, you might want to talk to a lawyer before talking to your insurer at all – help negotiating is always good. Finally, you might want to talk to a lawyer if you just aren't sure what to do next and you feel overwhelmed.

Fortunately, finding a good lawyer is far easier than figuring out if you need his or her help. Many attorneys will give you a free consultation, and this will be a good chance to see if you have any reason to work with a professional. If you are involved in an accident, it can never hurt to get a bit of expert advice.
