

Arizona Vehicle Replevin – Another Way to Recover Property

By: Nancy Kirby

<http://azdebtcollectionlaw.com/>

Arizona Vehicle Recovery

What happens when a borrower defaults on a secured loan, but the repo firm is unable to recover the collateral? When efforts to repossess fail, a lien holder should seriously consider seeking a court order for replevin. The purpose of the writ of replevin is to allow a creditor to legally retrieve property that secures a debt.

Replevin actions in Arizona are governed by Title 12 of the Arizona Revised Statutes. Lien holders may proceed to court pro se, or without an attorney, but most lien holders retain the services of a lawyer experienced in replevin actions to navigate the legal process. A replevin action is a civil matter subject to the rules of civil procedure.

When the case gets to court, the lien holder must establish his right to possession of the property, normally through a contract. He will have to show that the borrower breached the contract, usually due to nonpayment. Finally, the lien holder will have to demonstrate a good faith basis to believe the borrower has possession of the collateral.

A writ of replevin differs from a judgment in that the writ allows for the repossession of specific collateral PRIOR to a judgment. The writ does not authorize or order the payment of money to the lien holder.

About Seidberg Law

Unlike a “collection agency”, a professional debt collection law firm will work both in and out of the court system to help collect money owed. At Seidberg Law, we will first exhaust all non-judicial means to encourage delinquent customers to pay. If that doesn’t work, we can engage the legal process to seek payment of unpaid accounts.

Don’t let outstanding debt bankrupt your business. Call the professional debt collection attorneys at Seidberg Law for help. Centrally located in Phoenix, Arizona, Seidberg Law can help recover delinquent debts from debtors throughout Arizona. Call Seidberg Law today at (623) 258-4397 or visit us online at www.seidberglaw.com.