Americans Fight Corporate Misconduct

Whenever we think we've seen it all, we discover we haven't seen it all. As you read this month's newsletter on the worst corporate conduct of 2018, you will discover that some of the best-known companies in the world are blatantly compromising the health, safety, financial security, legal rights and well-being of all Americans. Meanwhile, many government agencies are under political pressure to retreat from their traditional role of regulatory watchdogs. Thankfully, we still have our civil justice system and a court of law to hold wrongdoers accountable. And that's a right we must protect.

A Special Report: The Worst Corporate Conduct of 2018

From the American Association for Justice

Abusing student loan borrowers, burying the consequence of global pollution, buying a seat for a state Supreme Court judge, even perpetuating child slavery – these are just a few examples of the worst corporate conduct revealed in this deeply disturbing report. And who's paying the price? Your family, friends, millions of fellow Americans and YOU.
